The top expert at the time, the Paris architect C. Noskowski, was hired to layout a new course. The new 18 hole course was completed under his guidance in 1933. However the economic depression and war that followed resulted in a halt to the project and the golf course was never totally completed-this included the clubhouse. In 1996 was the whole course renovated. By undergoing this massive rebuilding, the Karlovy Vary golf course was able to become one of the most prestigious European Golf establishments.

In the middle of amazing landscape of West Bohemia, in Cihelny close to Karlovy Vary, in the Nature Reserve Slavkovsky Forest, there is one of the best 18 hole golf course. One of the best golfers in history, Gary Player, was the architect of the course that ceremonially opened in 2001. His Gary Player Design Company created a so-called Scottish-architecture course. This is a more technical course, which rather than in length excels in the number of water surfaces and natural and artificial hazards.
